CLEVELAND REBUKED.

The returns from the Eastern elections show that the people of the country have administered a sounding rebuke to Cleveland.

The passage of the Repeal Bill which has been the pet measure of the Administration, has been immediately followed by Republican victories all over the East.

Under the circumstances there was little use in voting for the Populist ticket as the party is only organizing for the Presidential campaign. Voting the Republican ticket was the easiest method of expressing disapproval of the methods by which the Democratic party and Grover Cleveland conspired to trample down honest money in Congress and legislate in the interests of foreign bond holders.

On every side the country has expressed its strongest disapproval of the course by which the Executive bullied Congress into voting for a measure which was solely in the interest of Wall street and not endorsed by a majority of the people of the United States.

In no instance in the history of the country has an administration victory been so quickly followed by a ballot box rebuke from the people, and if the President does not keenly appreciate the unmistakable way he has been repudiated, he must be so wrapped up in himself as not to be able to realize the position in which he has placed himself and his party.

Never was there such a public exhibition of obstinacy and dogged persistence on the part of one man as the forcing of silver repeal down the throats of the people.

The people of the East, like the people of the West, want more money.

A SENSIBLE IDEA.

It is proposed at the Mid-Winter Fair to have restaurants suited to the tastes of all classes of people, come from where they may.

At Chicago the grub was of the poorest quality and sold at the highest rate. Imagine a sweet potatoe quoted on the menu at 50 cents. There ought to be good California meals at the regular prices. The Pacific Coast is the cheapest place in the world for food and if it keeps up its reputation in this respect during the Fair it will beat Chicago in this respect at least.

To make the New Englander feel at home for instance, there will be a fireplace ten feet wide in the kitchen where he is to eat.

About the fireplace will be the iron crane, pothooks, andirons and the other kitchen utensils that are customary.

Cupboards will be filled with pork and beans, brown bread and Johnny cake.

Mince pie and buckwheat cakes will be served for breakfast, with cider. The buckwheat cakes will be omitted at lunch, and cider alone will be served with the mince pie. The noon-hour dinner will bring forth pumpkin pie, with cider, and people who want pork and beans will only have to help themselves. Combination dishes of boiled potatoes, turnips and pork go with the pie.

Supper will consist of apple pie, Johnny-cake, walnuts and cider.

In a little cupboard as far away from the stove as possible there will be a few tin pans always filled with milk. The New Englanders can help themselves to the milk between meals if they get hungry, and if it will make them feel any more at home they can drink out of the pans.

By adding a little liver and bacon, some game and juicy beef steak, the sagebrusher can be made to feel quite at home there also.

In speaking of the matrimonial venture of Miss Kuhne Beveridge the Examiner says she ought to study anatomy a few years to be the best sculptress in the United States. Her opportunity of studying the anatomy of actor Coghlan will be comparatively short if Mrs. Coghlan No. 1 insists on the laws against bigamy being enforced.
